

The 3 treats you should never give your dog – including why the popular dental sticks don't actually clean their teeth thesun.co.uk/fabulous/25201062/dog-treats-avoid-pigs-ears-rawhide-dental-sticks

Rebecca Miller

30 December 2023

- Fabulous
- Real Life

RUFF DAY

Only 1% of pet owners brush their dog or cat's teeth every day

- Published: 11:31, 30 Dec 2023
- Updated: 16:50, 30 Dec 2023

Rebecca Miller

DOG psychologist and behaviour specialists @cherryhoggs explained why pigs ears, dental sticks, and rawhide are treats you should not be feeding your dog.

In a recent video which has been seen by over 258k people, the expert explained the “three treats we would never feed our dogs”.

3 treats you should not feed your dog!

SO, THREE TREATS

2

@cherryhoggs has nearly 60k followers on TikTokCredit: Tik Tok/@cherryhoggs

2

Pigs ears and rawhide can be choking hazards and hard to digest for dogsCredit: Getty

1. Pigs ears

He said: “Number one, pig ears,” and then referenced swine, which is a “contagious viral disease of animals that primarily affects” pigs.

The expert claimed “swine is hands down the dirtiest animal” and said the conditions pigs are kept in are dirty.

“Stop feeding your dog pig ears, it’s hands down the worst part of the pig as well,” he remarked.

According to Natural Farm Pet, “some vets may recommend pig ears as a treat for dogs in moderation, while others may advise against it due to the potential risks associated with them, such as bacterial contamination, choking, and digestive issues”.

“It’s best to consult with your veterinarian to determine if pig ears are a suitable treat for your dog.”

2. Dental sticks

The dog expert added: "Second, dental sticks. Don't care which ones you get - natural, unnatural, they're all bunch of s.

"If you actually want to clean your dog's teeth, brush your dog's teeth."

Brushing your dogs teeth daily is just as important as brushing your own, but currently, less than one percent of pet parents brush their cats or dogs teeth, according to Scrumbles.

There is no substitute for an old-fashioned toothbrush and paste (dog-specific toothpaste not human), but for convenience, a lot of people use oral care dog chews and dog dental sticks like Dentastix, which claim to keep your dog's teeth clean and healthy.

But the list of ingredients that make up dental chews isn't detailed - and they often include fatty ingredients, additives, and cereals, of which the latter turn to sugar when ingested, which can actually lead to cavities and bad breath, according to Scrumbles.

To add to this, the soft chew doesn't do much to naturally rub away at plaque, especially if your dog eats quickly.

3. Rawhide

"Thirdly, we will never feed our dogs rawhide," @cherryhoggs said.

"Rawhide is by far one of the worst parts of the animal, it's highly processed it's very hard for the digestive tract to digest, it has no nutritional value.

"There's so many better alternatives like liver or dehydrated beef or normal meat sources.

"So don't take these treats, and opt for better alternatives," he concluded.

According to Purina, a leading pet brand, rawhide is a "dog chew that's a by-product of the leather industry".

They explained: "It's made from the inner layer of either cow or horse hides (which is their skin). The outer layer of the hides is the leather part that's used for shoes, garments, upholstery, etc.

"The inner rawhide is treated, dehydrated and then formed into various shapes as a dog chew.

"The most common type of rawhide for dogs is a rawhide bone which is made up of layers of rawhide manipulated into a bone shape."

